We have lived long in the last four ears, and may see strange events in the next four. Wirtz was in high authority a few months ago; he is very low now. If he had foreseen what is now taking place, his conduct would have been very different. Let him that standeth take heed lest he fall. To do this they have sacrificed the lives of a million white et free, is still a mooted question. Their stock of merit may, therefore, dwindle lown in the light of experience to a very anall quantity. The sacritices might have been avoided, history may say, and we have no doubt will say, but for party ambition; and the boon conferred on slaves may be a curse and not a blessing. So in the end we tender them a niece of good advice, which they will not take; and that is, that they be a little modest and take care how they use power. It is dangerous. We know they feel happy and self-complacent now. The rebellion is down, and they will even have the aid of the rebels of the South. The millermium is come when the faithful may rejoice in the prospect of office in all time. So parties have felt before, when they did not know what a day would bring forth. Better be modest and moderate. *A shadow has fallen unon shoddy. Its chiefest attraction to the fair angels in crinoline has departed. The gas burns dimly to their enchanting eyes. The mazes of the German are nothing but aimless gambolings in a perfumed room. Saratogo and Long Branch are crowded with beauty and fashion, but, alas! something is wanting. A correspondent of the New York Herald tells the melaneholy

THE SCARCITY OF YOUNG MEN.

THE SCARCITY OF YOUNG MEN.

This is the general complaint all over the country at the places of fashiomable resort. Where are the young men? Here are plenty of young ladies, dressed in the most winning and faschating manner, and weighed down by their ponderous waterfalls. Here are the belles, but where are the beaux? Here are middle-aged men who have made their fortunes. Here are invalids. Here are mothers and here are invalids. Here are mothers and here are little children; but the life of soclety, the support of the nation, are not here. Have the first born of America, like the first born of Egypt, fallen as by a plague? They have. The plague is extortion. What is to become of Miss Flora Mc-Flimsey, of Madison Square, if the dashing beaux with their fast teams and fast manners are no longer to gild the crowded ball-rooms with their presence? How sad to have to flirt with "uniddle-aged men who have made their fortunes" instead of the gay, gallant, devoted, youthful cavallers who formerly crowded the corridors and balconles of the watering place! Middle-aged men with a plum are very well to marry, but one devoted, handsome, fascinating youth in the twentles is worth a dozen of them for a down-right fast, fascinating flirtation, as Miss Flora can tell

The war hasn't enriched the young men, it seems. They cannot go the pace which fashlon demands. Rides, suppers drives, &c., are luxurles beyond them. In their close counting-rooms, offices, or on their farms, they read the accounts of the blaze of fashion and finery with some what of the feeling that the Peri looked through the half-opened gates of Paradise. It is all very fine and grand, but it is not for them, poor wanderers of a stormy day. We searcely know what to say to the fair McFlimseys. To give up the watering-places is hard; to give up the beaux is impossible. Something must be done. It would hardly be feasible to advertise that Miss Flora was going to the springs, and was willing to pay the expenses of eight er ten young gentlemen of respecta ble families, who were to act as attendents. TREASURY DEPARTMENT, September 21, 1865.

The extent of sickness, mostly of the derile type, with "agur," is alarming to trangers. Disease seems to be swept over the land in every breeze from the tweet and that floating denon of the tweet, and that floating denon of the streets of New and watchinen, with club and ratt blace and roisous the sir cero to the bille that the second of the streets of New and watchinen, with club and ratt blace and roisous the sir cero to the the sir cero the sun, coines forth from his hiding place and poisons the air, even to the hills, with his malarions breath. The old residents all seem to be of the opinion that the fall will prove very sickly. It is late in the year that the ordinary diseases often assume a malignant and fatal type.

The excitement is growing pretty fast in Arkansas over the disfranchising law; and, just before I left, one of the newspapers at Little Rock was suppressed by military order, on account of its refusal to give the name of the author of an editorial article on that question. This had the effect to deter other sheets from firster, and the effect to deter other sheets from firster, and the effect to deter other sheets from firster, and the effect of the respectively. The police succeeded, in one instance, some twelve years since, in making a clean haul of the negroes, including the principal Fetish Man, old Obi Woman—natives of Africa—and all the charms, ther ventilation of similar views, and the torial article on that question. This had the effect to deter other sheets from first ther ventilation of similar views, and the whole question is committed to oral debate at the groceries and among the people. It is supposed by many that the initiary power will undertake to see the Stite authorities through in enforcing the law in question. Others declare that orders from Washington will soon set this thing right. In the meantime the line of separation every day becomes more plainly marked. On one side is a large portion of the Sonthern people; on the other the military and civil powers, their supporters, and almost all the adventurers and speculators that have taken up their abode in the State. Such a picture is not a pleasant one to contemplate. One of the old citizens posed me by asking if trunquillity or prosperity could be expected in Arkansas, so long as such a contest existed? "What is needed," said he, "is the spirit of fraternity, not of dissension. How are we to have this so long as we are denied the common rights of the citizen, and a political error is charged upon us as a criminal act? We sought to erect our own government and elect our own rulers. We failed tool this charged upon us as a criminal act? We sought to erect our own rulers. We failed to do this by negotiation and appeal to arms. We were beaten and obliged to submit to the political rule we had repudiated; but we are not, in a moral sense, criminals, either in act or intention, because our intent was whole party rose and commenced a most while the remainder of the "congregation" responded, as it were, with a low and a long-drawn how.

They failed in a trial by ballet. alropped into the pot-first, a dead snake we failed in a trinlof strength. The end sought by both was the good of those contesting for their own rights—nothing more." is a matter which is disturbing the people of Arkansas in no small degree, and the appearances are not favorable to either an early or satisfactory solution. The season for cotton picking has opened, but the free very solution is and applied by the contraction of the contraction the appearances are not favorable to either an early or satisfactory solution. The season for cotton picking has opened, but the free negro evinces little disposition to engage in that sort of labor. Threats are unde that, if they will not work, they shall not be fed, nor clothed, in their necessity. Others declare that he must work, or be driven away. After which the following address was delivered by Col. Mundy:

Sir Knights: You are here to-day as the representatives of an uge of nomance and of gallantry. The days of chivalry come to us mostly through the imaginations of the poet, or the songs of the troubador; and while our hearts expand with the glowing numbers of the one and the delightful harmony of the other, we look to you, as true men, for the noble deeds that inspired a theme with so much of glory and of heroism. Your bearing to-day should emulate the achievements of the past—the noble steed that then bore the mailed champion to honor will tramp the lists of to-day as proudly as of yore—the bright eyes of the fair that then nerved the salwart arm to victory will follow you now, and the fair that then reved the stalwart arm to victory will follow you now, and the fair that then the soft eye of the beantiful Berenguia rested upon him. Then, the smile of her whom you would honor, though nerving your valor in the lists, should ever prompt you to deeds of gallantry in the presence of the sex. Thus it was the proud knights of old became the embodyment of chivalry and honor. "Iwas thus the sphere of bright-eyed beauty was exalted, and this day the high-tonal damsel seeks her triumph in the valant but mugnanimous demeans of the champion she beckous to her side. "Love of ladies; splintering of lances! Stand torth, gallant knilghts, fair eyes you wour deeds!"

He had them sent loto the prisoners, for which they thanked him. Witness knew of Cupl. Wirtz heing absent with dogs, It was a penitentiary ollense for Confederates to trade for greenbacks. He thought this was declared by net of Congress and by a statule of the State of Georgia. The cantury around Andersonville was poor and as a consequence vegetables were scarce. Soon after some negroes had reached Andersonville he addressed a communication to tien. Winder, asking what disposition should be made of them. The reply was that the question was in abeyance at Richmond, and till it was settled they should be treated as prisoners of war. Witness did not know whether sentries were relieved after shooting prisoners, as such information never reached him.
